Chapter 2

Beware the Viking Raiders

While most of the crew on the deck started running in circles and screaming, Atticus took a long look at what was coming for them. That ship was built for battle, no question. There was just one huge sail, and the horned head painted on it was definitely frightening. Coloured shields were lined up along the side of the ship and oars pumped in perfect unison. It was like watching a dance.

11

A dance of death, thought Atticus. We're really going to cop it now.

'Stop screeeeeeaming!'

screamed First Mate. 'Everyone stop. It's not helping and it's really, really annoying!'

Amazingly, everyone stopped.

Everyone except Wrong Way Warren, who kept running in tight little circles with his hands in the air. Muscles tackled him and held him down. 'Warren. Stop. It's going to be okay, Captain Atticus will think of something. He always does.'

And with that, all eyes looked towards the crow's nest. First Mate, Princess, Fishface, Lightning Rod, Magic Harry, Muscles, Two Times, Mullet, Silent Type and Stinkeye.

14

Only Wrong Way Warren didn't look up. He was staring at Muscles in the funniest way.

'Oh, Captain, our Captain,' said First Mate. 'Any thoughts on a plan?'

Atticus looked to the crew below and his heart swelled. My crew, he thought. My very own, fantastic crew.

He looked back to the Viking ship, which really was approaching quite quickly – it seemed twice as big as it had been only moments ago. It was the rowing that did it, since there was barely enough wind to fill the sail.

As fast as he could, Atticus went through all the options he could think of.

'Get the oars,' said Atticus. 'We're going to outrun them, and we're going to go that way.' He pointed towards the back of the boat, to the direction they'd just come from. 'Spin this bad boy around!'

'That's the wrong way,' said Warren. 'Even I know that. That'll put us straight into the hands of Pirate Peg and Pegasis.'

'Pirate Peg,' scoffed First Mate. 'Bah!' She put the spyglass to her eye and looked towards the sea behind the ship. A small Doh! escaped her throat. 'She's coming. Peg's actually coming! How does she always do that?'

The entire crew looked to the west, and, sure enough, on the wrong side of the horizon were the three masts of Pegasis.

This was enough to get the entire crew running in circles and screaming again.

Had Atticus been on deck, he probably would have joined in. He wasn't sure what else he could do. 'Pirate Peg to the left of me, Vikings to the right,' he kind of sang to himself. 'And here I am, stuck in the middle with youse.'

17

'Stop. Please, everyone stop.'

Hearing their captain yell like that was enough to calm the mayhem.

'Magic Harry, get to the wheel and turn us to the north. We're going that way.'

We ~~are~~ going to outrun them and we ~~are~~ going to do it NOW.

How to draw

Atticus Van Tasticus

WHAT YOU NEED

- ✂ 2b (or similar) pencil.
- ✂ Black (felt tip) pen.
- ✂ A scribbly mind.

Use your pencil to begin.

Think of Atticus as being made from a bunch of shapes: circles, ovals, triangle and lines. As you improve, be more scribbly and free. He's an action character, so the faster you draw the more energy he'll have.

Details like hands can also be easy if thought of as simple shapes: a circle for a fist or the palm. If you need fingers, draw sausages. Feet are triangles with scribbly circles for toes. Inside toes are bigger than outside toes.

This is a quick two stage, scribbly rough.

A pirate parrot is the letter "B" tilted with a curved triangle shape, plus added details.

Think of Atticus's hat like it's made from folded paper. Simply add some curves later. The skull and crossed bones is an oval with two rectangles. Draw a scribbly "X" over the top to make sure the bones line up on the opposite side.

TO FINISH

- ✂ Place a new piece of paper over your scribbly drawing.
- ✂ Trace through using your black pen for a clean, finished and ready for action...

Aaaaaarrrrr!
Whichever way Atticus is looking, his hat always faces forward.
